

MEDLIT#45+ PROJECT FIND OUT WHAT'S BEEN HAPPENING RECENTLY

The MedLit#45+ project is entering in the final phase. At this point are available all the outputs created throughout the project period. The O1 has been used to develop a methodological framework for the building of digital skills through social media of low-skilled persons over 45, so as to enhance their access to employment opportunities. Taking advantages of this framework has been created the E-learning platform (O2) that was presented to target groups through an extensive pilot phase.

The Pilot Phase have involved more than 120 users in all partners country obtaining relevant feedback about the impact at local level.

An additional output that has been configured as part of the MedLit#45+ project is the creation of the Manual directed to professional to support unemployed persons. This manual, which represents the O3, has been translated in the six languages of the partner countries. Each partner described the course created in their own country to promote the use of the skills enhanced through the platform. The general feedback received from participants regards mainly the organizational aspects and the methodology and contents used in the course. Participants rates the course agenda in regards with the aims proposed as one of the best achievement. Moreover, good feedback has been obtained concerning the relevance of the course in regards to the professional life of the target groups. Follow the final part of the project taking part in the multiplier event that will be carried out in every partner country. News about these events will be available on the project dissemination channel presented below.
